SUMMARY

I believe technology should create careers, not confusion.

I started my career in the trenches—writing Python code, solving real production issues, and shipping working applications. That hands-on foundation shaped how I think about technology today: results matter more than theory, and execution beats explanation.

Now, as the Chief Technology Officer of an EdTech company, I lead the design and execution of industry-driven programs in AI with Python, Machine Learning, Web Development, RPA, and modern AI tools. My role goes beyond strategy—I work closely with teams, trainers, and interns to ensure everything we build is practical, scalable, and aligned with real hiring standards.
